Gascoyne 2 Community Hall has undergone a stunning transformation thanks to a major refurbishment project by the Council

GASCOYNE 2 Community Hall threw open its doors in style after being given a dramatic makeover.

The opening marked the completion of a successful Council project co-designed with local people to transform an outdated estate building, in Wick

Road, E9, into a first class community venue. The centre now boasts work areas with free Wi-Fi, a huge hall, and a modern, well-equipped kitchen for community groups to use. At the opening ceremony, on 27 April, residents enjoyed food and drinks, face-painting and tree-planting, as well as performances from young local singers, Josh Tenor and Kairi. For more, see page 3.

TRADING PLACES

STREET markets in Hackney have good reason to celebrate during the national Love Your Local Market campaign, which runs from 17 to 31 May, as more traders than ever are selling their wares across the borough.

Despite the well-documented downturn affecting high street chains, Hackney's markets are bucking the trend, with a 15 per cent increase in traders, meaning there were 6,668 more pitches let in 2018/19 than in 2016/17. A total of 750 traders regularly trade at the borough's markets.

For the first time since 2009, the level of trade means the Council is no longer having to contribute to the markets' running costs. This has been achieved without increasing trader fees, so pitches remain at a competitive rate, with the aim of encouraging more residents and local businesses to consider market trading.

To support people to do this, the markets' service is set to launch a new development programme, called 'Trading Places', later this year. The programme will provide prospective traders with quality training, while offering one-to-one mentorship and discounted pitches during the course.

Hackney's booming markets have been recognised nationally after being included in Time Out London's 'Best Street Food' category, receiving a commendation from the National Youth Markets Awards, and getting shortlisted for 'Most Improved Market' and 'Team of the Year' at the recent National Association of British Markets Awards.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Planning, Business and Investment, said: "Everyone involved in Hackney's street markets, from market inspectors to traders, have every right to be proud.

"Not only have they created London's best street markets, providing great goods and services at great value, but they also create the places that bring our communities together and make a fantastic contribution to Hackney's local economy and our high streets."

100 new Council homes

ONE hundred more homes being built by the Council will be let at a social rent to those most in need using funding from the Mayor of London.

The plans, approved by the Council's Cabinet on 29 April, will increase the number of genuinely affordable Council homes delivered on eight developments as part of its in-house, award-winning housebuilding programme.

The Council will use £10million it was awarded from the Mayor of London's Building Council Homes for Londoners programme to fund the swaps. Without this grant, the 100 homes would have been for shared ownership or sold outright to cover the costs of building new Council housing.

“ 100 more families in desperate need of a genuinely affordable Council home will have one ”

A further £35.5million of funding will be used to help build a further 2,000 new homes, on sites yet to be identified, which will start by 2022 – as well as supporting the delivery of homes for shared ownership on existing schemes. Further details on these new projects, which will be delivered using the Council's existing direct delivery approach, will be released once initial assessments on where they could be built take place.

Acting as its own developer, rather than selling off land, Hackney Council is already building 2,000 homes, three schools and a leisure centre between 2018 and 2022, with more than half of these homes for genuinely affordable social rent or shared ownership.

Philip Glanville, Mayor of Hackney, said: “I'm proud that Hackney is building thousands of homes across our borough, but housebuilding is an expensive business.

“Without a penny of Government support, we have to sell homes outright to pay for new Council housing.

“This funding from the Mayor of London is vital, and means 100 more families in desperate need of a genuinely affordable Council home will have one.”

Hackney to object to TfL's Old Street station planning application

THE Council will formally object to Transport for London's (TfL) Old Street station planning application following a vote by its planning sub-committee on 1 May.

The committee heard planning officers' concerns about the proposed design of the station entrance and the removal of subway access to the station from Hackney, which will increase journey times for people, who will have to cross six lanes of traffic to get to the new entrance.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Deputy Mayor of Hackney, said: “While we welcome the overall improvements to cycling facilities, which are much needed and long overdue, the proposals as they stand do not reflect the calls we made last year.

“The proposals leave residents and commuters with longer journey times and even more traffic flowing into the borough following the closure of one arm of the junction, which could have a significant economic impact on Hackney's businesses.”

The planning application for the new station entrance is expected to be heard by Islington Council's planning committee in the summer.

Gascoyne 2 Community Hall, once a tired and underused space, opened as a first-class community venue on 27 April

Core of the community

AN OUTDATED estate building has undergone a stunning transformation thanks to a major refurbishment project by the Council.

Gascoyne 2 Community Hall, once a tired and underused space, is now a first-class community venue boasting work areas with free Wi-Fi, a huge hall, and a modern, well-equipped kitchen for community groups to use.

The project, co-designed with local people, aimed to create a space that would bring residents together; offer a venue for businesses and the wider community to use; embed health, work, education and opportunity, and housing services into the heart of the community; and provide youth services and facilities the young people of the area told the Council they wanted and needed.

“Our investment in Gascoyne 2 Community Hall means it can remain an asset for all”

Cllr Clare Potter, the Speaker of Hackney, said at the launch event: “The aims of the project were ambitious but I believe we will deliver all of our objectives, and more.

“Our investment in Gascoyne 2 Community Hall means it can remain an asset for all, not only for current residents but for future generations too.

“This hall is important. Not just for what it delivers but what it represents. There is a lot of change happening in Hackney, some of which our residents are not comfortable with and much of which we – the Council – have no control over.

“But what we can do is try to ensure that local people benefit from the changes that are taking place; show that we are investing in the estates and communities that form the bedrock of our borough; and make sure our communities feel valued, supported and listened to.”

Guests from the local community attended the building’s opening ceremony on 27 April, where they enjoyed food and mocktails, face-painting, speeches and tree-planting, as well as performances from talented young local singers, Josh Tenor and Kairi.

The hall and its grounds, which includes a community garden, are already set to offer a wide-range of activities and services to improve residents’ health and wellbeing including fitness classes and meeting spaces for groups and community organisations.

The Council’s Hackney Works team, which supports people into employment and training, will also be based permanently onsite.

News in brief

Windrush compensation open

RESIDENTS who have been adversely affected by the Government’s ‘hostile environment’ immigration policies are being urged to apply for compensation.

The Home Office’s ‘Windrush Compensation Scheme’, named after the large numbers of the Windrush generation who have been mistreated over recent years, is available for those who have ‘suffered a loss’ because they could not easily demonstrate their right to live in the UK.

The scheme is open to anyone from a Commonwealth country who arrived before 1 January 1973, and those with a ‘right of abode’ or ‘settled status’ who arrived in the UK before 31 December 1988, regardless of their original nationality. As well as those directly affected, it also covers other family members such as children and carers. Compensation could be paid for loss of employment, immigration fees incurred, loss of tenancy and being made homeless, impact on health and education, non-access to banking, wrong detention and removal and general impact on ‘normal daily life’.

For more information, visit: www.gov.uk/guidance/windrush-compensation-scheme

Celebrate Foster Care Fortnight

I ♥ HACKNEY FOSTERING

TO celebrate Foster Care Fortnight, which runs from 13 to 26 May, the Council is urging residents to consider caring for vulnerable children and young people. Every month, an average of 30 children and young people in Hackney come into care. When these children are unable to stay with their birth parents – as a result of neglect, abuse, illness within the family or bereavement – foster carers can give these children a safe, stable and nurturing home. Interested residents can foster as a single applicant or a family. The service needs carers from all backgrounds. Anyone who has a spare bedroom in their home, and is open to caring for children over the age of eight, should email: fostering.recruitment@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 0800 0730 418.

Reminder to vote on 23 May

THE European election will take place on 23 May. Voter registration is now closed, and residents can check if they are registered to vote via their One Account. It is too late to apply for a postal vote. The deadline to register for a proxy vote, to allow someone to vote on your behalf, is 5pm on 15 May.

If you have recently applied for a postal vote you should receive it by 17 May. If you do not, call: 020 8356 3232. Remember that you do not need your poll card to vote. If you are unsure where your polling station is, use the checker on the Council’s website, which will be available from 20 May. Polling stations will be open 7am to 10pm. For more information on how to vote in Hackney, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/european-election-2019

Apprenticeships can kickstart a career

The Council's apprenticeship scheme lets candidates combine work with training, so they can learn while they earn

AN award-winning apprenticeship scheme run by the Council is seeking new candidates for its summer programme.

It is designed to give local people a chance to start their career within different Council departments.

This summer it will also include part-time vacancies, with roles available in business administration, plumbing, electrical, multi-trade, social care and finance departments.

The apprenticeship lets candidates combine work with training, meaning they can earn up to £22,000 while they learn and gain a nationally recognised qualification.

The programme has been a great success with current and former apprentices. Over 70 per cent choose to stay with the Council, either through permanent employment or a higher apprenticeship.

Patience Quarcoo is a resident engagement apprentice. She said: "I really enjoy the balance of real responsibilities and the ability to keep on learning."

The Council's scheme won 'Best School Leaver Programme in the Public Sector' at the annual School Leaver Awards last year, and has been nominated for the same award this year, based on direct feedback from Hackney apprentices.

Cllr Carole Williams,

"I really enjoy the balance of real responsibilities and the ability to keep on learning"

Cabinet Member for Employment, Skills and HR, said: "Hackney Council's award winning and highly competitive apprenticeship scheme is going from strength to strength. I am therefore delighted that we are recruiting for a further round of apprentices."

"This year we are continuing to demonstrate that we are an inclusive employer offering part-time apprenticeships aimed at candidates unable to commit to a full time role due to health issues or caring commitments."

"All of our apprentices over the age of 18 receive at least the London Living Wage because we want to make sure the scheme is accessible to Hackney residents who would like additional support to get the experience they need to secure quality jobs in a rapidly changing labour market."

There will be an open evening for prospective candidates on 15 May at Hackney Town Hall, from 3pm to 7pm. To register, visit: bit.ly/2V5yLJW or follow #HackneyApprentices on Twitter.

Statement from the Mayor of Hackney and Cllr Caroline Selman

Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, and Cllr Caroline Selman, Cabinet Member for Community Safety, respond to the recent fatalities in Hackney:

"RESIDENTS will be aware of a number of violent attacks in Hackney in recent weeks. We were deeply saddened to learn of the deaths of Tashaun Aird, 15, Joshua White, 29, and Steve Brown, 47. Our thoughts are with their loved ones and everyone affected by these tragedies.

Residents are understandably upset and concerned about what happened. We feel that sense of loss, and indeed anger, ourselves. We want to reassure people that there has been a robust response to these tragic incidents, and that there is a long-term strategy, with focused action in place, to keep Hackney safe.

The Council is continuing to work closely with the police, particularly our youth and community outreach support teams and Community Safety Enforcement Team. Cllr Selman attended a vigil for Tashaun and joined ward councillors to speak to residents to reassure them about action taken.

The factors leading to violent crime are incredibly complex, and tackling it is a long-standing priority for the Council and our partners in the police, voluntary sector and youth organisations. Last year we held a meeting with frontline workers, community leaders and partners to consider what more we can do, because it's clear that now more than ever we need to work together to put an end to violence on our streets.

While knife crime affects people of all ages, we know there is particular concern about its impact on young people. On 1 May, we attended the launch of the Hackney Young Futures Commission, which is led by young people. It was an event focused on the challenges our young people face, including safety, but with a real sense that together we can solve them. Feedback from last year's meeting made clear the importance of hearing directly about young people's experiences in response to issues like knife crime and putting young people at the heart of shaping the things that affect their lives.

To reflect this, we have increased the outreach work we do in local communities, expanded the community engagement work of the Integrated Gangs Unit with greater links with schools, community organisations and the wider community. This further tragic loss of life reminds us that we cannot afford to be complacent and brings home, in the saddest possible way, the urgent need to prioritise tackling serious youth violence."

Parents, carers or members of the community that have any concerns about a young person, groups of young people, or a location where they feel children are unsafe, can contact the Council's First Access & Screening Team (FAST). The team links professionals from children and families services and the police, health and probation service to support young people and families in need. Call on: 020 8356 5500 (out of hours: 020 8356 2710) or email: fast@hackney.gov.uk Support is also available at any one of the Council's youth hubs and projects, visit: www.younghackney.org; or contact Fearless, a website aimed at younger people, where you can anonymously report crimes or issues of concern. Visit: www.fearless.org/en

No butts as illegal tobacco seized

OVER 3,500 illegal cigarettes and 3kg of loose tobacco was seized by the Trading Standards team last month.

The illegal goods (pictured) – which have a street value in excess of £5,000 – were confiscated by Council officers from a woman in Graham Road, E8, on 25 April. She ran off before police officers arrived.

Cllr Caroline Selman, Cabinet Member for Community Safety, Policy and the Voluntary Sector, said: "Illegal tobacco is untaxed, unregulated and often funds organised crime groups. We will not hesitate to take enforcement action against those responsible for selling it."

Anyone with information about the woman, or who suspects people or businesses of selling illegal tobacco or single cigarettes, should call: 020 8356 4929; or: trading.standards@hackney.gov.uk This can be done anonymously.

RIDLEY

OFTEN referred to as 'the heart of Dalston', Ridley Road Market has been known as a place to pick up bargain fruit, vegetables and household items for decades. The Council recently committed £1.5million to increase the long-term sustainability of Ridley Road Market and its surrounding area, including helping traders to accept card payments. The market has seen a three per cent occupancy increase over the last year and the market's service has let 32,530 pitches – 850 more than in 2016/17. Ridley Road is set to see some exciting growth and improvements to an already thriving market centred in the heart of the community.

On your marks!

Get set to celebrate Hackney's fantastic street markets for Love Your Local Market fortnight

KINGSLAND

THE much-loved waste market, which dated back to the 1960s, relaunched last June. It is the ideal spot for finding random gems at bargain prices. There are DIY tools, vintage vinyl records, books and a bike repair stall. Kingsland's longest trader Harry West played a significant role in the revival of the market and remains a trader there to this day, in his legendary spot at the top of the market. Kingsland Market is always looking for new traders.

HOXTON

ESTABLISHED in 1687, it is Hackney's oldest market. Most will remember Hoxton as a traditional Saturday market but over the past year it has extended trading into the weekdays, and has seen a huge 69 per cent occupancy increase as a result. The market is also home to the youngest traders in Hackney. Young traders, aged nine to 13, from Morningside and Gascoyne Estate youth clubs, recently won the National Market Traders' Federation 'Special Commendation Award'. Hoxton Street continues to support young traders, having recently added a group of young chefs from New City College, Hackney, to its roster of traders. The annual Hoxton Summer Fair is set to run again this year.

BROADWAY

ONE of the top tourist destinations in Hackney, it has been home to market traders since the 1890s. Today, the market provides a unique mixture of international tastes and cultures. Hosting over 150 traders every Saturday, Broadway Market offers fresh produce, authentic street food, original clothing, arts and crafts and much more. Broadway Market was also named one of London's best street food destinations for 2019 by Time Out London. Over the past year there has been a 47 per cent increase in occupancy, meaning over 7,500 pitches have been let in 2018/19. It is now rated as London's third best market in 2019.

AND THERE'S MORE!

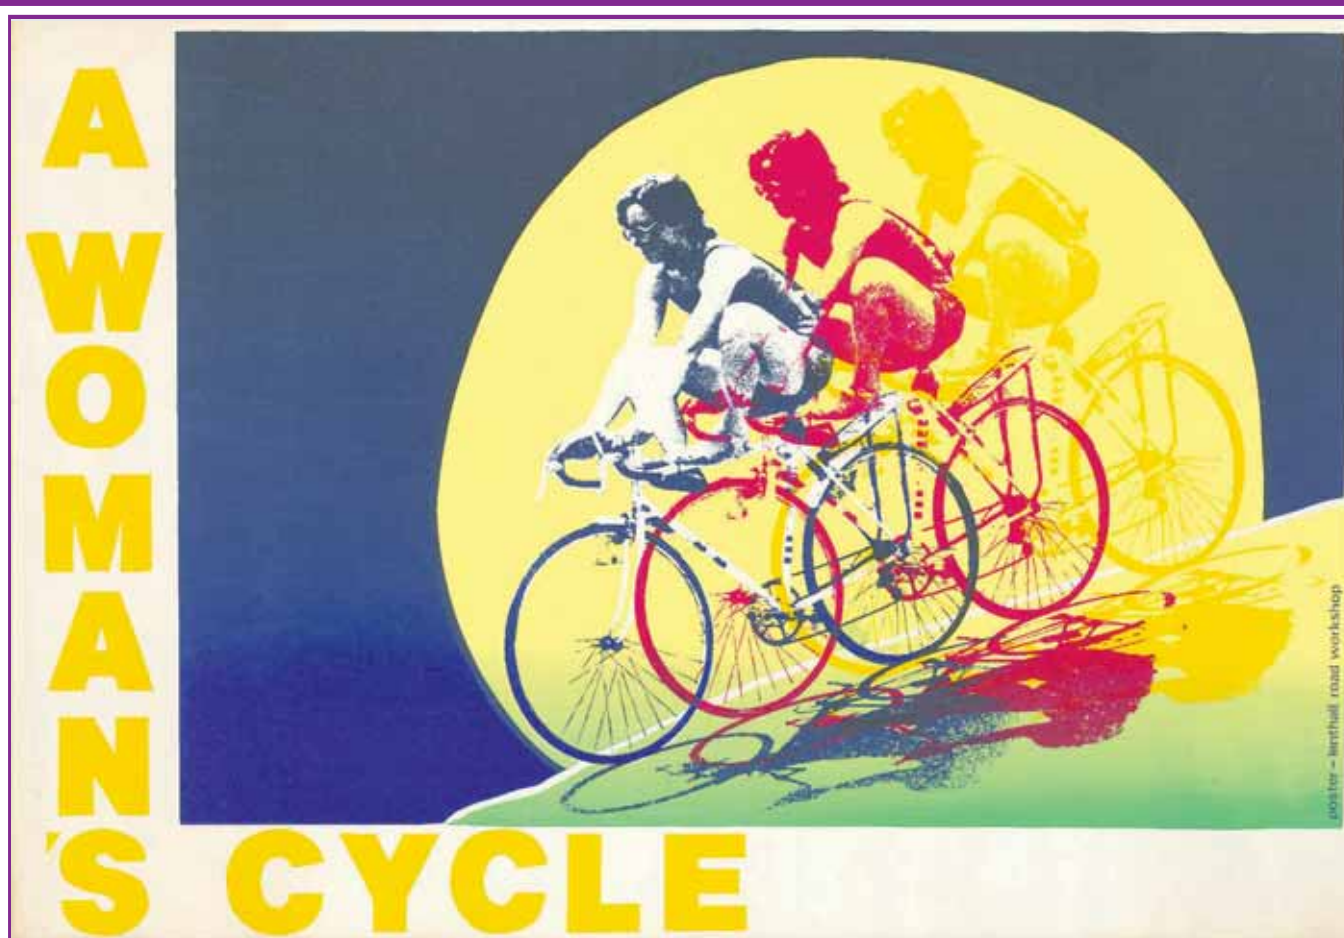

AS well as Hackney's bigger markets there are a series of mini sites around the borough, which are growing in popularity and occupancy. These sites include the Narrow Way, in Hackney Central; Old Street; and Calvert Avenue and Leonard Circus, both in Shoreditch, all of which sell everything from street food and fruit and veg to educational books, children's wear and flowers. Over the past year, the markets' service has let 3,281 pitches creating a 70 per cent occupancy increase across these sites. Follow @marketshackney on Twitter and Instagram to keep up to date with all the markets in Hackney including the growing mini sites. Any interested traders selling bric-a-brac, vintage goods or second-hand bargains should contact marketsservice@hackney.gov.uk

During the 1990s the workshop became a one-women enterprise celebrating the lesbian and gay community. Photographer Gonul Zeki (1960-2016) had run a fully functioning darkroom at the workshop, and taught classes teaching people how to develop their own photographs. While there she began to experiment with screen-printing. Gonul used the workshop to print on items like t-shirts for this developing culture, in particular for lesbians who were less catered for. Though now a commercial enterprise, the workshop continued with the aim to empower and represent marginalised groups. Trading under her company Shrinking Violet, Gonul's signature t-shirts and mugs became a regular feature at Pride festivals around Britain.

Women on screens

Printmaking, photography and community activism at Lenthall Road Workshop

FOR over 15 years women in Hackney were making history behind the unassuming yellow door of 81 Lenthall Road in Haggerston.

From some of the first queer slogan t-shirts, to posters showing the real experiences of women, the Lenthall Road Workshop contributed to a national movement of grassroots arts, radical politics, feminism, anti-racism and lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer and intersex rights.

The history of the Lenthall Road Workshop is being uncovered in a new exhibition opening at Hackney Museum on 14 May, which includes posters and objects created at the workshop.

“We were definitely trying to change something in society; to change how women were viewed in society”

Lenthall Road was started by three women in 1975 as a community screen-printing and photography project. Local groups and individuals were offered a cheap and friendly space to learn skills and use the equipment to make their own images and posters.

The workshop empowered people fighting for change in Hackney and beyond, supporting many groups to creatively publicise their events and demands. From making posters of women racing in wheelchairs and protesting on the streets, to teaching printing and photography, the Lenthall Road Workshop encouraged the local community – especially women and girls from marginalised groups – to empower themselves.

Claudette Johnson, artist and former worker of the Lenthall Road Workshop, said: “As soon as we were in our boiler suits and masks we really looked like guerrilla fighters. We were definitely trying to change something in society; to change how women were viewed in society.”

The workshop wasn't just supporting local communities but was also helping to affect political change across the country. Groups printed materials for many different campaigns – from gay liberation, against racism, and in support of the miners' strikes.

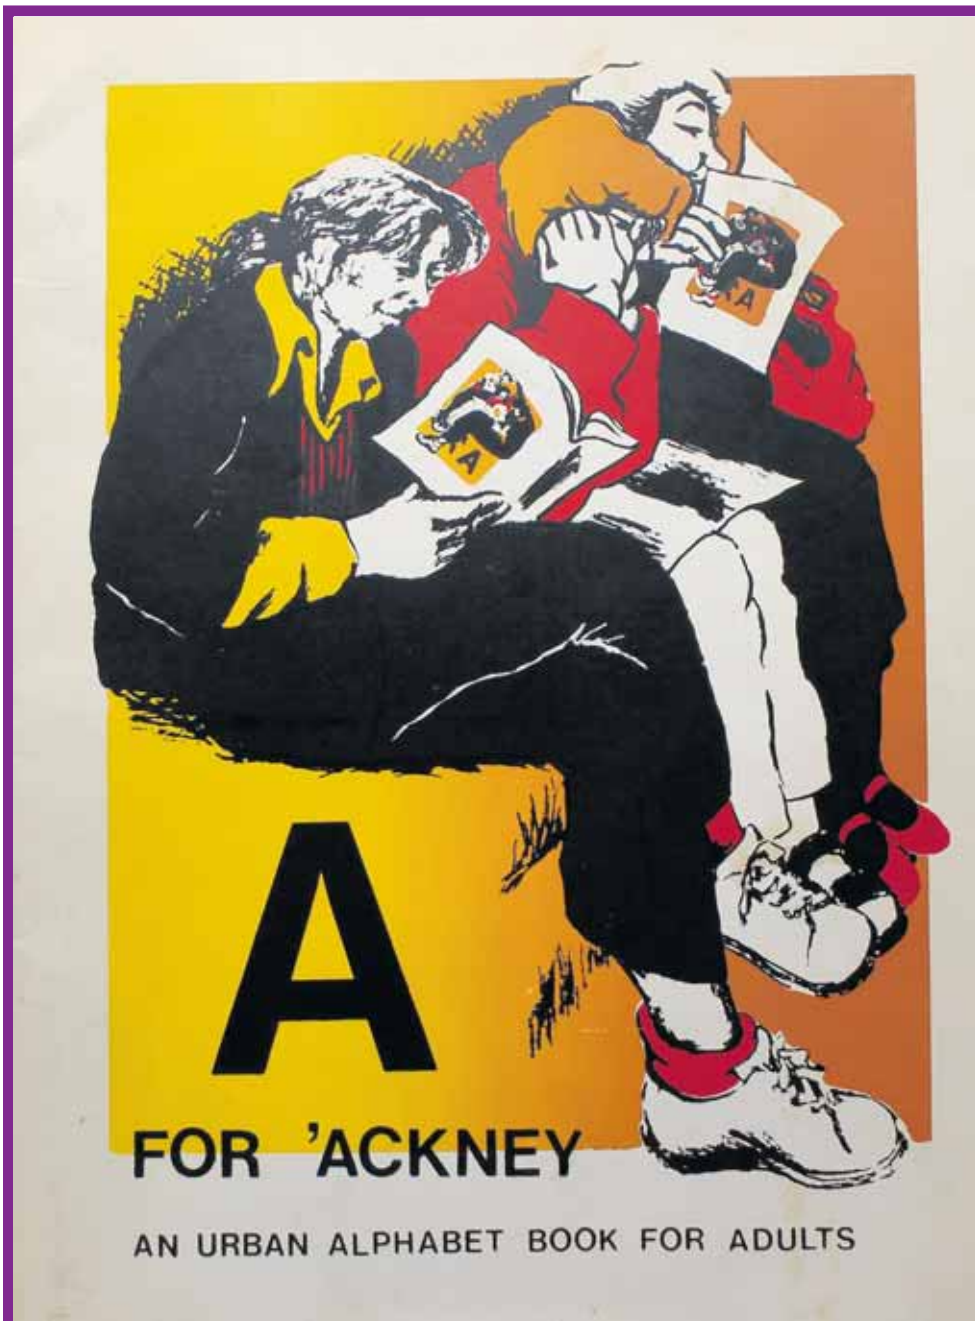

Women on Screens: Printmaking, photography and community activism at Lenthall Road Workshop 1970s–1990s is on at Hackney Museum from 14 May to 31 August.

The exhibition has been created in collaboration with former Lenthall Road workers.

The Hackney Young Futures Commission aims to find out the views of young people living in the borough

A taste of the future

Photos: Gary Manhine

WHAT would you change if you were Mayor of Hackney for the day? This is just one of the questions being answered by young people across the borough as part of the Hackney Young Futures Commission.

The independent, youth-led commission is set to run over the next two years to find out how residents, aged 10 to 25 years-old, view Hackney as a place to live, the changes they would like to see, and how they want to be involved in the decisions that affect them.

More than 100 young people attended the Hackney Young Futures launch at Forest Road Youth Hub on 1 May. Attendees tucked into food created by apprentice chefs from Blue Marble Catering, watched live performances and heard from commission chairs Jermain Jackman and Shekeila Scarlett, and vice-chairs Georgina Appeagyei and Mishaque Jarrett.

Thyreece Williams, 17, from Clapton is a member of the commissioning board.

He said: "The commission is a smart idea. The youth are the future, if they are not able to make decisions now then our future will not be as good.

"If, through this, we can make young people feel comfortable to talk then we can get some

DID YOU KNOW?

“A movement has started for young people in Hackney to work together”

good ideas.”

As well as networking with other young people, attendees also heard from the Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, about his journey, where he initially left school without any qualifications at 14 and then went back to college later on, where he received five GCSEs and then went on to further education.

Bernice Vigo, 14, from Shoreditch, said: “It’s good to be asking young people what they think, and I like that this is all run by young people.”

“If I was Mayor for the day I would change the curriculum for all children to include politics and what’s going on in the world around them so they can all get involved.”

Throughout the event young people were asked to answer questions as part of a survey being conducted by the commission, which started discussions on a wide range of topics ranging from work experience to youth clubs.

Thaddaeus Brown, 22, from Homerton, said: “Trying to make sure young people’s voices are heard is really important. It’s good to see so many young people down here of all different ages and backgrounds, all getting together to see what’s happening with the commission.”

Rio McKenzie, 11, from Clapton, said: “Today is a chance to say what we want to change. I want to make sure all children feel safe.”

Answers to some of the questions posed to young people at the event sparked conversations on the positive aspects of Hackney – such as being diverse and welcoming and having a lot of talented young people – to negatives, where young people feel unsafe, and feel there are fewer opportunities for them.

Shekeila Scarlett, co-chair of the commission, said:

“It was great to see so many young people come together at the commission launch. Between the launch and other events we’ve already held and attended, some great conversations and discussions have started on the issues affecting young people and some of the changes people want to see made.”

“However, we still need to hear from all young people in Hackney. Even if it’s filling in the survey online, joining the commission itself or coming along to one of our events, then please do get in touch.”

“A movement has started for young people in Hackney to work together to make positive changes, for and within our communities, so get in touch and get involved.”

Commission co-chair Jermain Jackman, added: “There was an amazing amount of energy and positivity in the room at the Young Futures Commission launch.”

“We are excited about harnessing all that amazing energy, as well as the talent from Hackney’s young people, to really make a positive difference to our lives here in the borough.”

By Harriet Worsley

MY first home was a coal cellar," says Marina Sirtis. "My parents had moved to the UK from Greece when my mum was six months pregnant with me. They left their family and support systems, with nothing but the shirts on their backs. It never made sense to me."

She didn't discover the reason until she was 50. By then, having moved to LA and starred in all seven seasons of the iconic 'Star Trek: The Next Generation' series, she was living a life very far removed from that early poverty.

She says: "I was going to a Star Trek convention in Stockholm and needed something to read, so I picked up a book called 'Inside Hitler's Greece'."

In it, she read the details of Greece's Civil War, in which communists tried, unsuccessfully, to take control of the country.

"My mother was spending her last days in a hospital in Athens," says Marina. "So I flew back and asked her if Dad was a communist. She said yes. It was the big, shameful family secret."

"When the civil war finished, Dad was told he was on a blacklist. His life was in danger. They had to do a moonlight flit. That's why I was born in Hackney."

Transplanted to London, the Sirtises grafted hard. Marina says: "In Greece, they had been dirt poor. Mum didn't wear shoes till she was 16. When they arrived here, Dad worked seven days a week as a tailor to provide for us.... he was a real artist. He made all the jackets Roger Moore wears in the James Bond films."

Home life, meanwhile, was traditional in the Sirtis house. Marina says: "They brought the old ways with them from Greece."

Which presented her with a problem. She continues: "I knew I was going to be an actress from the age of three. I would stand on my seat on the bus and sing 'Que Sera, Sera' to other passengers."

Her parents, however, disapproved. She says: "They wouldn't even let me perform in school plays. I had to say I was in detention several times a week, so that I could sneak to rehearsals."

But, the young Marina was determined. She says: "When I was in the upper sixth, I secretly applied to drama school."

She was accepted into the prestigious Guildhall School of Music and Drama. But she had to tell her parents.

"My mother never forgave me for turning down a place at Bristol University to go to Guildhall instead," says Marina. Even after she graduated, and got her first job as a member of the repertory company at the Connaught Theatre in Worthing, her parents would come to visit on a Sunday, when there were no performances, so that Marina's mother didn't have to see her on the stage.

Marina says: "They wanted me to have stability and money, they didn't want me to experience the poverty they had. And having an actress daughter was a bit shameful in their community.

"I never regretted my choice. I was a jobbing theatre actress for years and there would be breaks of months between jobs. But acting is who I am."

In 1986, at the age of 31, she decided to make yet another brave move, this time to Los Angeles. But, says Marina: "It wasn't like I decided to go and seek my fortune. Actually, I'd just had my heart broken. I was whining to my friend and she said: 'oh for god's sake, just go to LA'."

"It seemed a good idea to put thousands of miles between me and this guy. And so I did."

Within five days of landing, she had secured

“They wanted me to have stability and money, they didn't want me to experience the poverty they had”

her first job in a TV show called 'Hunter'.

Marina laughs: "I had to have an Australian accent. They asked if mine was authentic so I just said yeah. I told them I'd lived in Melbourne. Naughty, but it worked!"

Her career path was not always this smooth, however. "When I did the final auditions for 'Star Trek: The Next Generation', I waited to hear and no news came," she says. "I assumed

I hadn't got it. I was stone broke. I had a ticket booked for London on a plane that was leaving the next day. My visa was running out. So I opened my bag, started to pack and that's when the phone rang."

She had landed the part of Deanna Troi, the Enterprise-D ship's Lieutenant-Commander, and trusted adviser to Captain Jean-Luc Picard. She had, however, no idea of the magnitude of the moment.

"I'd never watched the show," she says. "I had no idea what I was getting into. But coming from England, the salary looked like a telephone number to me. And I loved the character. It wasn't until later that I realised I'd entered a world that people cared passionately about."

The role consumed her professional life for years but, she says, she was lucky. Her voice and hair were so different in the show that she was able to walk the streets without any hassle.

Marina says: "Sir Patrick [Stewart] couldn't step out of the door without being recognised. I feel sorry for him, really. I want to go on living my private life like a normal person."

In fact, it was when the show ended that Marina struggled. She recalls: "I didn't think I could play any other roles. I was terrified to audition."

That lack of self-confidence passed. At 64, Marina is, she says: "Much more comfortable in my own skin than ever before. And I'm fulfilling a lifelong dream. I'm making my West End debut."

In June, she will take to the stage at the Trafalgar Studios to perform in 'Dark Sublime', a new play by Michael Dennis.

"As soon as tickets went on sale, the producers were calling me saying: 'people are booking from all over the world'," says Marina.

Adding: "Star Trek fans really are the most loyal in the history of show business. They will literally get on a plane to see a performance by one of its stars. It blows my mind. I'm excited, nervous, terrified. I just hope I make it worth their while."

Word on the street

A BLUEPRINT to help councils across the country introduce School Streets, which ban motor traffic outside schools at opening and closing times, has been launched by the Council.

School Streets have been operating in Hackney since 2017. There are five at present, with two more, at Audrey Street (Sebright School and the City of London Academy, Shoreditch Park) and Detmold Road (Southwold School), due to launch next month.

The scheme aims to reclaim the roads outside schools from cars, improving air quality at the school gates and making it easier for children to walk and cycle to school.

Since the scheme was launched, the proportion of children cycling to participating schools in Hackney has increased by over 50 per cent, with traffic outside the schools reducing by around two-thirds, improving air quality at school opening and closing times.

The Council has plans to implement 17 School Streets by

“We want to see schools transformed and the school-run become a thing of the past”

2022, which will cover close to one-third of primary schools in the borough.

The School Streets toolkit is a free step-by-step guide, which will help councils to launch their own School Streets. A copy of the guide is being sent to all councils across the country.

Its launch comes as Public Health England advised in March that idling outside school should be banned.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Deputy Mayor of Hackney, said: “Our pioneering School Streets have been incredibly successful so far, with widespread support from children, parents, teachers and local people.

“They also go so much further than simply banning idling outside schools – they make the streets outside places for everyone, tackle poor air quality and tackle the obesity crisis by making it easier for kids to walk or cycle to school. “We’ve had lots of interest in School Streets from as far afield as Toronto and Singapore and feel that we have a duty to share our new toolkit with councils nationwide, as we want to see schools transformed and the school run become a thing of the past.”

This month, the Council is also delivering a School Streets webinar to planners from cities in North America. It is also hosting full-day training for UK local authorities in partnership with national sustainable transport body Modeshift and partnering with walking charity Living Streets to promote School Streets during Walk to School Week.

All spaces on the course were taken within three hours of opening, demonstrating the level of interest in School Streets. More training days will be added in due course.

News in brief

Join in Community Clean Up

PEOPLE in Hackney are being invited to spend a couple of hours on May Bank Holiday enjoying the borough’s green spaces and giving them a spring clean. The Community Clean Up, funded by the Ministry of Housing, Communities and Local Government, will litter pick areas in Middlesex Filter Beds, Hackney Marshes, the Lea Navigation Canal, pictured, Gilpin Square, Daubeney Fields, Mabley Green and Hackney Wick Woodland.

Cllr Jon Burke, Cabinet Member for Energy, Sustainability and Community Services, said: “I hope residents can spare the time to come along and help us give these areas a good spring clean while meeting their neighbours in the process.”

The clean up takes place on 26 May, from 10am-12pm. There are three meeting points for the clean up: Princess of Wales Pub, 146 Lea Bridge Road, E5; Millfields Waste Transfer Depot on Millfields Road, E5; and La Mela, 25-27 Marsh Hill, E9. The first 50 people to sign up will be given a reusable bottle or coffee cup. Volunteers are asked to make their way to one of the meeting points for a 10am start. Residents can sign up at: news.hackney.gov.uk/communitycleanup

Volunteer to go plastic-free

CAMPAIGN group Plastic Free Hackney is seeking volunteers to help tackle society’s excessive use of throwaway plastic.

The group is looking to create London’s first plastic-free community in Hackney and aims to engage and connect individuals, communities and businesses in the collective effort to reduce the flow of single-use plastics into the marine environment.

Bettina Maidment, community leader of the initiative, said: “Hackney is such a great borough to live in. I truly believe that we have the passion and the energy to solve the plastic pollution crisis together so that Hackney becomes London’s first plastic-free borough.”

The group organises regular litter picks on the last Sunday of each month. The next one is set to take place on 26 May.

For more information, or to become a volunteer, visit: www.plasticfreehackney.com; or email: hello@plasticfreehackney.com

All Points East

24 May - 4 June, Victoria Park, E3 5TB

SO many bands, so little time. It's the bane of all modern music festival goers. So much to pack in, so many great acts to see but their timings clash...What to do?

Well, All Points East may have found the solution: why not hold the festival over two weekends? Simple. That's right, two monster, three-day fests on your doorstep.

Attend Weekend 1 (24 to 26 May) and see The Chemical Brothers, The Strokes and Christine and the Queens headline with the likes of (deep breath) Hot Chip, Primal Scream, Interpol, Petite Noir, Kate Tempest, Ibibio Sound System, Little Simz and Peggy Gou.

► For more info, visit: www.allpointseastfestival.com

From top left: Kate Tempest, Primal Scream, Petite Noir, Bon Iver, Christine and the Queens, Ibibio Sound System, Little Simz, Peggy Gou, Hot Chip, The Chemical Brothers, John Grant

Meanwhile, Weekend 2 (31 May to 2 June) will see Bring Me The Horizon, Mumford and Sons and Bon Iver take the headline slots, ably backed by, among others; Run The Jewels, John Grant, Dizzy Rascal, Idles, Courtney Barnett, Leon Bridges, Marc Demarco, First Aid Kit and Ezra Furman.

The names you've just read barely skim the surface of the sheer quantity and quality of acts confirmed. And there are even more acts to be announced closer to the time.

Day and multi-day tickets are available, as well as tickets for official after party events. As expected tickets are selling fast, so best be quick.

Ute Lemper: Rendezvous with Marlene

14-19 May, Arcola Theatre, 24 Ashwin Street, Dalston, E8 3DL

WHEN Olivier Award-winning Ute Lemper was just at the very start of her career in music and theatre, she sent a postcard to the maestro Marlene Dietrich. In the postcard she apologised for the media attention drawing comparisons between them (Ute had just received the French Molière Award for her performance in 'Cabaret' in Paris.)

A three-hour phone call followed, where Marlene looked back on a long, fulfilled life of movies, music, incredible collaborations, love stories and stardom.

As Ute says: "Rendezvous with Marlene means a lot to me – it is my personal homage to that great lady. There are many portraits of Marlene out there, but this one is coming from my heart. Audiences are in for an incredible story; history, fate, courage, style, politics, glamour and sex, talent and a huge career."

Dalston Children's Festival

25 May and 1 June, various Dalston locations

FAMILIES will be spoilt for choice at this year's Dalston Children's Festival, with 27 free activities on offer.

Taking place on 25 May and 1 June, the Dalston Children's Festival is a fantastic way for Hackney's under 12s to be entertained for free whilst giving families the chance to discover the fun to be had in Dalston.

With creativity and play at the heart of the festival, Dalston's vibrant artistic and play communities will have activities on offer both indoors and out.

Some of the many highlights of the festival include: Gypsy Roma singing and dancing with the Yagori dance school; hula-hooping and circus skills with the Guinness World Record holders, Marawar's Majorettes; a visit from the Hackney Play Bus; pizza making using the Dalston Eastern Curve pizza oven; and a drag queen storyteller at the Hackney Pride 365 family picnic. The Dalston Children's Festival is a community-led event organised by the Dalston Children's Network, a collective of organisations that have an on-going offer for children and young people in Dalston, and is supported by the Council. Greek myths brought to life

Pupils at Gayhurst School exhibit their artwork inspired by the story of Theseus and the Minotaur

THE story of Theseus and the Minotaur has inspired artists from Gustave Moreau to Pablo Picasso and now, the students of Gayhurst School, E8, too.

The latest exhibition at the school's art gallery, called #TAG, exhibits the work of Year 3 and 4 children, made in response to the famous Greek myth.

Called 'Myth', the show is the culmination of a project run by Art Hoppers, the Hackney-based arts education organisation. Over the course of several weeks, the children explored the myth itself and artistic responses to it. They wrapped bandages around their limbs and set them in Plaster of Paris, created a mosaic labyrinth, painted characters onto terracotta, and fashioned a monstrous minotaur head from foil, paint and cardboard.

Year 4 artist Canaan said: "We had to focus hard and pay great attention to detail. We did very good teamwork together, to make sure we finished on time."

Mimi, a Year 3 teacher, added: "The quality of the work is outstanding. The vision of the whole thing exceeded my expectations. I'm really proud."

The exhibition will run until 17 May. The gallery is open weekdays during school collection time.

News in brief

Olive pupils do the carbon free school run...walk...cycle

PARENTS and children at the Olive School, N16, have been taking part in a two-week challenge aimed at cleaning the capital's air and improving childhood health.

From 25 March to 5 April, the whole primary school was asked to walk to school or travel on bikes and scooters instead of the car. They were among 2,300 schools which signed up to Sustrans' Big Pedal, a nationwide project run each year by the sustainable transport charity.

Caterina Park, principal of the Olive School, said: "It's a great way to get more of our pupils travelling actively to school and is a simple way to boost their physical and mental health."

Those who could not cycle, walk or scoot were still involved in the fun. On the final day of the challenge, pupils were invited to dress up as their favourite caped crusader, to celebrate their power to tackle climate change.

Free meals for all at Mandeville

MANDEVILLE Primary School, E5, is set to offer every child a free school meal from this September, saving families up to £300 a year for each child.

Associate headteacher, Matthew Shapland, said: "We want every child at Mandeville to succeed and we know that a healthy and nutritious lunch is so important in supporting learning that we want to make sure that it's available to every child."

From scratch to success: Cardinal Pole's basketball team finishes third in league

A GIRLS' basketball team has finished third in a nationwide competition, despite the squad being set up less than two years ago.

Cardinal Pole's Year 8 basketball team saw off competition from 30 schools across the country to finish third in the Junior NBA League.

The team's coach Ms Grego said: "Not only has basketball advanced pupils' skill and fitness, but training twice a week in the early morning has supported the girls in exceeding broader educational outcomes too such – as attendance, behaviour and focus towards academic excellence."

Team member Chidera George agreed. She said: "Basketball means a lot to me. It lets me express myself whether I am happy and angry."

"I have learnt a lot like how to attack, defend, dribble and shoot. It has been a challenge, but it was worth it now we have come this far."

Cardinal Pole's executive headteacher, Ms Heffernan, added: "From scratch to success, this achievement is truly a testament to the hard work and talent of our students and their coach."

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2018. Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR PHILIP GLANVILLE

Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville was directly elected by the borough in 2018. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall. To book an appointment, email: mayer@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 2212. Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney, who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Clare Potter.

A HACKNEY business has had its marketing strategy cleaned up by a team of children from their local primary school.

Pupils from Rushmore School, E5, created a promotional campaign for Chatsworth Cleaners before organising and hosting an event to celebrate the 30 years its owners Ayer and Semra Ozyurek have spent in the community.

The campaign was the result of the school's work with Pitch Futures, an initiative which, explained founder Sherry Collins: "Was created to inspire and educate children at primary school level about the opportunities available to them in the creative industry."

The organisation introduces primary school pupils to leading professionals from the worlds of advertising, visual effects, sound design, animation and more.

Margaret Foster, deputy headteacher at Rushmore School, said: "We targeted children in Years 5 and 6 who we thought would benefit from the experience."

"The children met with Sherry weekly, initially to develop their pitches for promoting the Chatsworth Cleaners business, then to work on presenting their pitch to the business owners. Finally, the children got stuck into making their ideas a reality."

Following visits from advertising professionals, the students took charge of devising a guest list, producing a cake decoration stall, and creating activities that included a t-shirt signing table, raffle and a fashion show in which young guests could dress-up using clothes donated from the cleaners.

Margaret continued: "The project has given children opportunities to develop their ability to organise themselves and others, to speak in front of an audience and to get a sense of what it would be like to work in the advertising industry.

"We saw a marked increase in the confidence of the kids as the project came to fruition."

The event was promoted in the school newsletter and via emails to parents, while posters were put up locally and specially created invitations were placed in pupils' school bags.

"Being able to actually execute your ideas in a real event was great," said pupil Lorna Hackney.

"We got to have fun while learning life lessons," added Mischa Arthur.

Chatsworth Cleaner co-owner Semra said: "When I thought back through all the work they'd put in, I sat there and I cried – in a good way! Seeing them try that hard was amazing.

They're very talented children, very wise. I couldn't believe how they'd put all that together. It might sound simple, but it meant such a lot."

Choir for 12 to 18-year-olds

A NEW project, which aims to take Hackney teens with no previous experience and turn them into a choir that can sing at the Royal Albert Hall, has been launched. Based at St Paul's West Hackney, the brand new 'Senior Choir' will be open to all 12 to 18-year-olds. Members do not need to be able to read music or play an instrument. Its director, Tom Daggett, of St Paul's Cathedral's Music Department, hopes to create a choir that will sing in some of London's leading venues, and address wider social challenges such as isolation and ambition.

Rev Niall Weir, of St Paul's West Hackney, said: "This is an amazing chance to engage with some of the greatest music ever written."

The choir, which includes free pizza, will run during term time on Mondays from 4pm, at St Paul's West Hackney Church Hall, 184 Stoke Newington Road, N16 7QB.

Hackney rower joins Team GB

HACKNEY rower Louis Powell and sculls partner Joe Long saw off competition from Swiss, German and Japanese teams to finish second in the Junior Men's Double Sculls final at the Munich Junior Regatta earlier this month.

Louis, 17, who also competed in the Quadruple Sculls, made the step up to represent Team GB after competing for England at the Home International Regatta in Cork last year. The Lea Rowing Club member has won multiple medals at the London Youth Games. He currently attends Stoke Newington School, N16.

Louis, pictured below, said: "I've been a member of Lea Rowing Club in Hackney since I was 12 years-old and being supported by my coaches and team mates at the club has played a major part in getting me this far. I really enjoyed representing my country at the Munich Regatta and it was a great experience."

Cllr Jon Burke, Cabinet Member for Energy, Sustainability and Community Services, said: "I'd like to congratulate Louis on his move up into the Team GB team for the Munich Regatta. We're really proud to have athletes like Louis representing the borough on the world stage."

The Munich Regatta, which attracts over 1,000 European rowers from 15 countries, is Europe's leading high performance regatta for junior rowers.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Waterhouse

www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Waterhouse – a social enterprise restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch. Chicken chow mein is a delicious dish, which has become one of the mainstay additions to Waterhouse's specials. A satisfying treat consisting of egg noodles, finely prepared vegetables, and succulent chicken cubes.

Chicken chow mein

Serves 4

Preparation time
15 mins

Cooking time
15 mins

Ingredients

- 2 whole chicken breasts
- Pack of egg noodles
- 1 whole white onion
- Assorted bell peppers
- 1 bag of beansprouts
- 1 small Chinese cabbage
- 3 medium carrots
- Soy sauce
- Teriyaki sauce
- Chinese 5 spice
- Salt
- Grounded white pepper
- Sesame oil

before marinating in teriyaki sauce

- Wash the vegetables. Thinly slice the white onion, peppers and Chinese cabbage. Julienne the carrots into thin slices
- Lightly sauté the vegetables and beansprouts, while seasoning with a small pinch of salt, Chinese 5 spice and grounded white pepper. Empty into a bowl and set aside
- Bring a pot of lightly salted water to the boil. Add the egg noodles and stir frequently for three to four minutes or until cooked. Strain and set aside
- Bring a frying pan with a drizzle of sesame oil to a high heat. Place the chicken cubes into the pan and wait until the outside of the chicken is white before adding all the vegetables. Let it fry for 30 seconds. Add five tablespoons of soy sauce and mix together
- Add your cooked egg noodles to the pan and mix with the vegetables before adding a large spoonful of teriyaki sauce and seasoning with salt and pepper to taste
- Leave for 1 minute before removing from the heat. Serve into four bowls or five-to-six small portions. Enjoy!

Method

- Dice the chicken breasts into medium-sized cubes and season with salt and pepper

Take part in the Hackney energy company focus group

THE Council is in the process of setting up a not-for-profit energy supply company to provide competitively-priced and renewable energy to all residents and businesses. Any surpluses generated by the company will be re-invested in the local community.

The energy company will provide fairer tariffs to prepayment (pay-as-you-go) customers, who have been traditionally poorly served by the energy market.

It will also provide renewable energy to customers by maximising the use of 50 per cent of the Council's residential roof space, covering it in solar panels and allowing in-borough renewable energy generation.

The company will be owned by Hackney Council, working in partnership with a fully licensed supply partner.

The Council would like a variety of residents to take part in focus groups this month to inform the development of the brand for the Council's not-for-profit energy company.

All participants will be given a £20 Love2Shop voucher as a thank you for attending one of the focus groups.

To register your interest in taking part, visit: consultation.hackney.gov.uk/; or email: consultation@hackney.gov.uk with your contact details and the words 'energy company' as the heading, and one of the team will get back to you.

Leading the way

THE Council is partnering with the City of London Corporation to co-host the first London Walking and Cycling Conference this month.

After seven successful years the Hackney Cycling Conference has been revamped and will now be hosted at Guildhall, EC2V, on 24 May.

The event, in association with Steer, will see over 200 delegates hear from 35 speakers on how cities can be transformed for walking and cycling.

Among the speakers at this year's conference are the Walking and Cycling Commissioner, Will Norman, and Rotterdam's Vice-Mayor for Mobility, Judith Bokhove.

With Hackney boasting

“We’re leading the way in Hackney in reclaiming the borough for people not cars, and tackling poor air quality”

London's highest cycling rates, and the City of London having the highest walking rates in the capital, the conference will combine their expertise to consider the wider social, environmental and economic benefits of investing in walking, cycling and healthy streets.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Deputy Mayor of Hackney, said: “We’re leading the way in Hackney in reclaiming our borough for people not cars, making it better for walking and cycling and tackling poor air quality.

“I’m incredibly excited about the line-up for the London Walking and Cycling conference, which builds on the Cycling Conference we’ve run for the past seven years, to consider how we can make the capital better for all forms of sustainable transport.”

News in brief

Move together in King's Park

RESIDENTS living in the King's Park ward, which includes the Kingsmead and Clapton Park estates, are being invited to join a research team to look into how being active benefits their everyday lives.

King's Park Moving Together is a three-year project, funded by Sport England, that will look at a range of ways to get more people moving.

Residents interested in getting involved can go to an information event on 16 May at Kingsmead Community Centre, from 4pm to 6.30pm; and on 20 May at Forrester Community Centre, from 11am to 1pm.

A 'kids corner' for children aged under 10 will be available to help keep children occupied. A meal will also be served at the end of each session for those who attend.

To attend an event, or for information on the project or the community researcher roles, call the Moving Together team on: 020 8356 7030; or email: moving.together@hackney.gov.uk

Join the Festival of Fitness

THE Hackney Festival of Fitness – which culminates in the half marathon – is set to return from 17 to 19 May.

The Friday will see pre-race warm up sessions, food, drink and nutritional advice, and FIT FILMS open air cinema screenings at Hackney Marshes.

On Saturday, there is a dedicated day of fitness classes for all ages and abilities, including drum and bass workout Fight Klub, Ministry of Sound Fitness' the Evolution of Music, Sweat & Sound yoga and meditation, and more.

If that sounds too active then support the 20,000 runners taking on the Hackney Half Marathon on Sunday.

For more information, visit: www.virginsport.com/event/hackney-2019

Get ready for Mental Health Awareness Week

RESIDENTS are being encouraged to take five simple steps every day for Mental Health Awareness Week.

During the event, which runs from 13 to 19 May, the Council and local health partners will be promoting City and Hackney Clinical Commissioning Group's local health campaign '5 to Thrive'.

The five steps are:

- Give – volunteer or join a community group
- Keep learning – try new things like signing up for a cooking course
- Take notice – be curious of what is taking place around you

- Be active – find a physical activity you enjoy
- Connect – with people at home, work or school.

Ahead of Mental Health Awareness Week, the Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, visited East London Foundation NHS Trust (ELFT) and met patients and staff.

Dr Navina Evans, ELFT Chief Executive, said:

“It was great to meet the Mayor and have really honest conversations about possibilities for increased collaboration.”

As part of the week, the City and Wellbeing Network will host a Take a Pause festival at Dalston

Mayor Glanville with ELFT staff members Lawford Clough, Dr Navina Evans, Sheraz Ahmad and Andrew Horobin

Curve Garden on 16 May, from 6 to 9pm, and Richmond Road Medical Centre, E8, is holding an event to show health and wellbeing services available in Hackney on 15 May from 2 to 6pm.
